The Relationship between Ratings and Default (2006) - Default Ratio, Rating Transition Matrix and Broad-Definition Default Ratio -

Rating and Investment Information, Inc. (R&I) has updated its default ratio by adding rating and default data for fiscal 2005. The survey covers a total of 1,309 issuers rated by R&I and its two predecessors from fiscal 1978 to the beginning of fiscal 2005. Of the companies surveyed, six went into default in fiscal 2005. In each case, a period of four or more years had lapsed since the rating had been canceled and the cumulative default ratio had fallen in the short period following the updating of R&I's data. Furthermore, the ratings prior to the cancellation of the six issuers were relatively low, so R&I was able to again confirm the relatively high correlation between ratings and the default ratio.

R&I's purpose in releasing the default ratio is to provide information advantageous for investors on investment decisions concerning bonds or loans by clarifying, on a time series basis, the relationship between R&I ratings and defaults. As a default ratio-related statistic, R&I has released credit risk ratios since March 1997. In addition, R&I has released broad-definition default ratios since June 2000. Both of these were statistics summarizing data on the incidence of a broad range of events from actual defaults on liabilities and Japanese corporate practices until the 1990s and served as alternatives for default ratios. In view of changes in the economic environment surrounding corporate insolvencies since the final years of the 1990s, R&I subsequently introduced the use of actual default ratios in September 2005.

The broad-definition default ratios which R&I provided in the six-year period since 2000 filled a key role as a statistic describing the relationship of ratings and defaults in the period when insolvency cases were not clear. However, the introduction of default ratios eliminates the need for such a statistic. Therefore, this is the last time R&I will renew the broad-definition default ratio and in the future will not undertake calculations of this ratio. The results of R&I's update are shown in Appendixes 3 and 4. For details on the broad-definition default ratio, please refer to the July 1, 2005 news release "The Relationship Between Ratings and Default – The Broad-Definition Default Ratio and the Rating Transition Matrix".

1. Definition of default

The following events are defined as a default. As a rule, the facts are confirmed from press reports in national newspapers, the brief statement of financial results following the end of a fiscal period or the fiscal year financial statements.

The definition of default takes into consideration a situation in which the pledge of the obligor to creditors concerning the issuer's financial obligations is not fulfilled. Legal bankruptcy means either the obligor itself or a third party petitions for application of the Bankruptcy Law or other bankruptcy statutes. Abandonment of claims, debt-equity swaps, reductions in interest rates and extensions of the principal or interest payment date, on the other hand, are regarded as restructuring of financial obligation. R&I may consider debt-equity swaps of obligations held by a holding company as a default of its subsidiary on a case-by-case basis.

- (1) Legal bankruptcy
- (2) Failure to perform payment on a financial obligation
- (3) Petition for or implementation of restructuring of a financial obligation substantially disadvantageous to creditors

2. Issuers Covered

As a rule, the sample of issuers covered includes all of the issuing entities domiciled in Japan that received an R&I rating during the period from April 1, 1978 to April 1, 2005. Sovereign issuers, local government bodies, life insurance companies and issuers of asset-backed securities, however, are excluded. The sample also encompasses schools and investment companies (such as J-REIT). Altogether, there were 1,309 such issuers, of which 611 had ratings as of April 1, 2005.

3. Ratings

The ratings used for the default ratio calculation are Issuer Ratings. The calculation does not include insurance claims paying ability ratings or short-term ratings. It also excludes ratings for bonds backed by guarantees by parent companies, banks, or financial guarantee companies. For the fiscal years through March 31, 1998, the calculation uses ratings issued by the Japan Bond Research Institute (JBRI) and Nippon Investors Services (NIS), the two companies that merged to form R&I. It also includes publicly announced trial ratings assigned prior to these two companies' commencement of business ratings. In instances when there are ratings from both JBRI and NIS, the lower of the two ratings is used.

When R&I assigns an Long-term Issue Rating, it first analyzes that company's default risk to determine the likelihood the issuer will fall into default or other management difficulties (default risk analysis). The next step is to analyze recovery risk, which means gauging the likely extent of the recovery of the principal of corporate bonds and other specific obligations in the event of default (recovery risk analysis). Analysis of default risk constitutes the essence of the rating process. Such analysis evaluates an issuer's ability to meet all of its financial obligations, and represents an evaluation of company's creditworthiness. The rating at this stage, known as an Issuer Rating, is used for the default ratio.

<Definition of the Issuer Rating>

Issuer Rating is an R&I's opinion regarding an issuer's overall capacity to repay its entire financial obligation, and it is assigned to all issuers. The rating of individual obligations (i.e. bonds and loans etc.) includes the prospect of recovery and reflects the terms and conditions of the agreement and it may be lower or higher than Issuer Rating.

4. Calculation Method

To reflect corporate mergers and divisions in the default statistics, R&I introduced two rules for the latest statistics to address succession and termination of inclusion in the survey. In the process of preparing the default ratio and Rating Transition Matrix, R&I adopted the concept of cohorts for both

Ratings are statements of R&I's opinion shown in certain symbols regarding an Issuer's general capacity (credit quality) to repay its financial obligation and individual debts (bonds and loans, etc.) and it is not a statement of recommendations to buy, hold, or sell any securities. Information has been obtained by R&I from sources believed to be reliable, however, its accuracy, adequacy, or completeness is not guaranteed. Therefore, R&I is not responsible for any errors or omissions or the result obtained from the use of the rating. # NEWS RELEASE measures. Each cohort is a group composed of issuers for which R&I had issued a rating at a certain point in time. Specifically, for each year from 1978 to 2005, all of the issuers that had a rating on April 1 were organized into a cohort for that respective year. For the process of creating the default ratio and the Rating Transition Matrix, R&I surveyed the changes in Issuer Ratings and occurrences of default within a cohort for each year passed.

To address successions, when an issuer merges or divides R&I will determine which firm to include in future surveys according to the successor to the financial obligation. For mergers, the post-merger firm will be surveyed because the post-merger firm will succeed to the obligations of the pre-merger firms. In cases of corporate division, R&I will decide which corporation to include by focusing on the size of the obligations taken over by the successor entities. When a new enterprise group is formed through business reorganization, however, R&I will make its decision by considering the capital procurement structure of the group. For example, when a certain firm establishes a new holding company and the holding company becomes the main capital procurement entity, R&I will follow the holding company regardless of which firm succeeds to the debt obligation.

When the corporate character of Issuer A that had a rating in a given year is extinguished through a merger in the following year and the merger counterparty B is the surviving entity, under R&I's former methodology the Issuer A was treated as "unrated" one year later. After introducing the succession methodology, R&I will treat the rating of merger counterparty B (if a rating has been assigned) as the rating of Issuer A after one year. If merger counterparty B defaults after four years, this will be totaled in the statistics as a default by Issuer A after four years.

When monitoring the occurrence of a default becomes difficult, R&I will cease including the issuer in the statistics. When a firm that no longer has a rating becomes a wholly-owned subsidiary of another operating company and sufficient information can no longer be obtained, or when several corporations succeed to an obligation in the case of a corporate division and it becomes difficult to determine adequately which firm to include in the survey as the successor, R&I will no longer track the firm. For the specific methodology used to terminate inclusion in the survey, refer to the default ratio calculation method described below. Note there is no relationship between a decision to terminate inclusion in the statistics and a decline in the creditworthiness of the firm.

<Default Ratio by Cohort>

The results from examining the relationship between the rating and default for each cohort are shown in Appendix 1. The time axis is divided into intervals of one-year periods. The one-year default ratio is determined by dividing the number of issuers that defaulted in each period by the number of issuers at the beginning of the period. The one-year non-default ratio (one-year survival rate) is then determined for each past period by subtracting the one-year default ratio from 1. In addition, the cumulative survival rate for multiple years is determined by multiplying the one-year survival rates. The cumulative default ratio is determined by subtracting the cumulative survival rate from 1. This is further explained by the mathematical expression shown below. For the group of issuers with rating  $i$  belonging to cohort  $c$ , the one-year survival rate after  $t$  year(s) since the cohort was composed,  $s(c,i,t)$ , is determined as shown below.

$$s(c,i,t) = 1 - \frac{d(c,i,t)}{u(c,i,t-1)}$$

In this expression,  $d(c,i,t)$  is the number of issuers that belong to cohort  $c$ , had rating  $i$  when the cohort was composed and defaulted during the one-year period after  $t-1$  year(s) since the cohort was composed.  $u(c,i,t-1)$  is the number of issuers that belongs to cohort  $c$ , had rating  $i$  when the cohort was composed and those who still remain to be traced after  $t-1$  year(s) since the cohort was composed. (These are the number of issuers that had not defaulted and those who remained to be traced for the survey until then.) Therefore  $s(c,i,t)$  shows the one-year period survival rate (non-default ratio) for cohort  $c$ , rating  $i$ , after  $t-1$  years since the cohort was composed. The  $T$  year(s) cumulative default ratio  $D(c,i,T)$  for cohort  $c$ , rating  $i$  is then stipulated as follows.

< Average Cumulative Default Ratio >

Appendix 2 shows the average cumulative default ratios calculated from the cohorts from 1978 to 2005. The average cumulative default ratio is determined by first calculating the average of the one-year survival rate of all cohorts weighted by the number of issuers which was used to calculate each one-year survival rate. Next, the average cumulative survival rate is obtained by multiplying the average one-year survival rates, and finally, the average cumulative default rate is determined by subtracting this result from 1.

For the issuer group with rating i, the average one-year survival rate s(i,t) is determined as

$$s(i, t) = \frac{\sum_{c \in \{1978, 1979, \dots, 2006-t\}} u(c, i, t-1) \times s(c, i, t)}{\sum_{c \in \{1978, 1979, \dots, 2006-t\}} u(c, i, t-1)}$$

The T year(s) average cumulative default ratio D(i,T) for rating i is determined as follows.

$$D(i, T) = 1 - \prod_{t=1}^T s(i, t)$$

Users of this statistic must note carefully the fact this cumulative average default ratio does not illustrate the default ratio at any given time in the past.

5. The Rating Transition Matrix

The rating transition matrix shows how ratings assigned to issuers composing a cohort have changed over a certain period of time. Table 1 is a concrete example of a rating transition matrix. The table indicates what specific issuer ratings as of April 1, 2004 had become one year later, on April 1, 2005. For example, on April 1, 2004, there were 61 issuers with a BBB- rating. Of these, 43 still had a BBB- rating on April 1, 2005, 10 had been upgraded to BBB, and 1 had been downgraded to BB+. The 7 remaining companies did not have ratings as of April 1, 2005, mainly because their rated bonds had been redeemed.

There are instances when an issuer has a rating while it has been counted as a case of default. Such issuers are categorized as an instance of default in Table 1. For example, even when an issuer has an actual rating of B+, it will be tallied in the "Default" column and not in the column for a B+ rating if that issuer fits the definition of default.

6. To Access the Data

Detailed calculation results can be downloaded from R&I's web site (<http://www.r-i.co.jp/>). For a list of default bond issuers not covered in this news release and changes in their ratings, treatment of debt successions and termination of issuers from the survey, please contact R&I mentioned below.

R&I surveys on default cases and cases of surviving companies are based on widely available data such as newspaper articles and corporate financial reports. To achieve its objectives in announcing default ratios by clarifying on a time series basis the relationship between ratings and defaults, R&I adjusts data by reviewing whatever useful past information it can obtain.

Ratings are statements of R&I's opinion shown in certain symbols regarding an Issuer's general capacity (credit quality) to repay its financial obligation and individual debts (bonds and loans, etc.) and it is not a statement of recommendations to buy, hold, or sell any securities. Information has been obtained by R&I from sources believed to be reliable, however, its accuracy, adequacy, or completeness is not guaranteed. Therefore, R&I is not responsible for any errors or omissions or the result obtained from the use of the rating. As a general rule, R&I provides the rating services for a rating fee paid by the Issuer.

Ratings are statements of R&I's opinion shown in certain symbols regarding an Issuer's general capacity (credit quality) to repay its financial obligation and individual debts (bonds and loans, etc.) and it is not a statement of recommendations to buy, hold, or sell any securities. Information has been obtained by R&I from sources believed to be reliable, however, its accuracy, adequacy, or completeness is not guaranteed. Therefore, R&I is not responsible for any errors or omissions or the result obtained from the use of the rating. As a general rule, R&I provides the rating services for a rating fee paid by the Issuer.

Ratings are statements of R&I's opinion shown in certain symbols regarding an Issuer's general capacity (credit quality) to repay its financial obligation and individual debts (bonds and loans, etc.) and it is not a statement of recommendations to buy, hold, or sell any securities. Information has been obtained by R&I from sources believed to be reliable, however, its accuracy, adequacy, or completeness is not guaranteed. Therefore, R&I is not responsible for any errors or omissions or the result obtained from the use of the rating. As a general rule, R&I provides the rating services for a rating fee paid by the Issuer.

Ratings are statements of R&I's opinion shown in certain symbols regarding an Issuer's general capacity (credit quality) to repay its financial obligation and individual debts (bonds and loans, etc.) and it is not a statement of recommendations to buy, hold, or sell any securities. Information has been obtained by R&I from sources believed to be reliable, however, its accuracy, adequacy, or completeness is not guaranteed. Therefore, R&I is not responsible for any errors or omissions or the result obtained from the use of the rating. As a general rule, R&I provides the rating services for a rating fee paid by the Issuer.
